The reason why certain democrats are doing so much howling about the "not issue" is that they are sitting on a barbed fence, and the position is uncomfortable.

Chairman Walker, of the democratic state committee has issued a very timely address. It is an appeal to his friends to attend the democratic funeral on the 24th of next November.

Here is a (fancy illustration of the position of Mr. Wolfe, the prohibition candidate for governor of Pennsylvania: At a prohibition candidate for governor he is proclaiming his desire to smother the republican party, while as a prohibition candidate for the legislature in Union county he is beseeching republicans to vote for him. He seems to be playing it on the prohibitionists in much the same way that he is playing it on the republicans.

Commenting on the small returns from a political life, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat moralizes as follows: President Eliot says that young men of culture are deterred from entering politics, not because they are averse to such a career in a general way, but because the pecuniary returns are too small. There is manifest ground for a feeling of that kind when the fact is notorious, for instance, that it costs $1,200 to get a democratic nomination for congress in the Ninth District of Missouri.

Some democrats in Milwaukee are grumbling because the republicans of that city wouldn't endorse the nomination of John Black for congress, inasmuch as he was foreman of the jury that convicted some of the anarchists; and because Brown was nominated they say that the "not issue" is for the benefit of the republicans, but not for the democrats. Had the democratic state convention endorsed Governor Rusk, as it was advised to do by many very prominent democrats, the Milwaukee republicans would have endorsed the nomination of John Black. So the position of some of the Milwaukee democrats is that of condemning the republicans for not doing what they would not do themselves.

THE SALOON IN POLITICS.

One of the best democratic members of the legislature two years ago was Hugh Ryan, of Milwaukee. He is a man of sober sense, of learning, and possesses a good stock of political honor. He had the courage to vote for what was called the high license measure. Although he represented a strong democratic ward which was controlled by the saloon element, he had the conscience to do what he thought was best, and was willing to abide by the consequences. When the time came for nominating a candidate for the assembly in the First ward, which was represented two years ago by Mr. Ryan, the saloon keepers organized to defeat him. Before the convention was held, he wrote to some of his political friends in the First ward:

I have no doubt that a majority of the democrats of the first ward approve a $200 license. I have no apology to make for my vote on that bill, and I am not begging and do not propose to beg for the renomination, but I greatly dislike the ward and the politics in it, if the saloon keepers are an endorsement of what I have done. This issue having been forced by saloon keepers, it would, in my opinion, be disgraceful to the ward and the democrats in it, if the saloon keepers were allowed to triumph.

Mr. Ryan was defeated, and that defeat was accomplished by the whisky element in the democratic party of his ward, which was intended as a punishment for his vote for the $200 license.

There are times when the saloon is attempting to control the politics of the large cities, and therefore are "perilous times." The American saloon system has reached a magnitude that threatens the foundations of government, of society, and of the home. No one who has the good of these at heart, can remain neutral on this all-important question. Republicans can not afford to do it, and democrats can not afford to show any indifference in the matter without betraying the trust that is involved in American citizenship. Therefore, if the republicans of the First ward of Milwaukee want to serve their city best, do society a distinguished service and do great honor to themselves, let them join with the better element in the democratic party in that ward, and greet Mr. Ryan to the assembly in spite of the defeat whisky power of the city.

This would be a graceful thing for the republicans to do, and it would also be a very fitting endorsement of Mr. Ryan's independent action in voting for a curtailment of the saloon power.

In view of the solemn fact that the whisky power is making a desperate attempt to corrupt the politics in all our large cities, and is breeding debauchery, poverty, and crime, the friends of temperance, of law and order, of good government, of clean politics, and of high-souled citizenship, can not afford to look upon the situation with indifference. Men and brethren, let us think soberly of these things.

VOORHEES AS A CRIMINAL LAWYER.

United States Senator Daniel W. Voorhees, of Indiana is fast gaining a national reputation as the legal defender of "men who shoot, stab, or pound to death the destroyers of their domestic happiness." He is a powerful jury lawyer. He can melt a jury to tears as quickly as any criminal lawyer in this country. He very seldom assists in the prosecution, but nearly always is retained by the defense. He likes the defense better because it affords him floor play for his strange and remarkable power as an advocate. One of the best known cases in which he gained signal triumph was that of Captain Johnson, of Tennessee, charged with killing a neighbor for running his home. The murder was admitted, but of course the plea of insanity was entered. George Alfred Townsend, briefly describes the wondrous effect Mr. Voorhees' argument had on the jury:

When Voorhees rose to begin his plea sentiment was against him. He knew this, and he evidently made up his mind to do his best. Warning to his work he first depicted the bygone Eden in which Johnson had lived before his enemy came, then traced the slinky course of the modern serpent as it wound its maddening way into the peaceful garden, and described the ruin and desolation that marked its envenomed trail. As he proceeded, first one juror, then another, and finally all agreed to waive their prejudice, and in a little while the whole twelve sat with tears trickling down their cheeks. Even the judge sank down below the books on his desk to hide the emotion he could not control. The acquittal was a matter of course, and for a time it was hard to tell which was the greater hero, Voorhees or his client. The Indiana senator has a voice like a trumpet as easily as it can imitate the bird-like voice of the dove, and though there are many better lawyers in the country than he, there are but few who can sway a jury so well.

Mr. Voorhees has been retained to defend W. W. Hazelton, of Stevens Point, charged with the killing of Mr. A. E. Morse, formerly of Janesville. He is there because he stands foremost among the lawyers of this country as a successful defender of murderers, and he is expected to acquit Hazelton. But in this case he may be checked. For the prosecution is two of the best known lawyers of this state—Ogden H. Fethers and John Winans, who propose to fight every inch of the ground with all the ability these successful and splendid lawyers possess. The Hazelton trial will be one of the greatest legal combats ever witnessed in this state, and when the arguments begin, look out for some of the finest forensic efforts that ever honored the courts of Wisconsin.

A CHANGE OF TUNE.

The only way some of the lessening democratic papers of the state can find in which to conduct the campaign is to attempt to ridicule Governor Rusk, and hoot at the idea that he rendered law and order or life and property any service during the riots in Milwaukee last May. Prominent among the papers that are conducting a campaign of this kind is the Madison Democrat. That paper was remarkably enthusiastic last spring over the splendid manner in which the governor crushed the riots. When the mutterings of anarchists were in the air and the Heymeyer tragedy had just taken place, and the anarchists in Milwaukee had been suppressed, the Madison Democrat in its soul-rejoicing said of Governor Rusk and the militia:

Gov. Rusk, so we yet appears, has performed his duty in a manner that will meet with the approval of the people. He went into Milwaukee when satisfied that life and property was in danger; he called the first regiment in there, and then he directed the owners of industries closed by the mob to open their works. He stationed the troops in proper places with orders to load with balls and shoot to kill. He came riding and some distance occurred but the factories were protected. The casualties among the rioters were not large, but they evidently understood that they are not bossing the city just now. The most encouraging thing about the situation is that the governor has the backbone to not permit the troops to be sent. The people of the state will be thankful for this. This feeling with soldiers has scandalized the country long enough.

Nearly a week after it published the foregoing editorial item, the Madison Democrat was in the same condition of mind, and joyfully spoke as follows:

Fortunately for the Wisconsin militia and for the credit of the state, Wisconsin has a commander who has some sense, and knows what troops are for; and he put an officer in command at Bay View who also has some sense and knows what troops are for; the troops were given the only order that ought ever be given, troops that in fact with ball and shot to kill.  To the everlasting honor of Gov. Rusk and Maj. Treasurer, these officers had sense enough to know their duty and courage enough to perform it.

When Governor Rusk returned from Milwaukee to his home after the riot troubles, the same Madison Democrat said of the reception which was tendered him:

The reception given the governor and his military company from this city, that has been at Milwaukee for a week, meant a good deal. It meant, first, a royal welcome to those who hastened, on a moment's notice, to perform a most unpleasant duty in support of liberty and law; and it meant a good deal more than this. In the light of the cowardly course of the majority in half a dozen other states, the people read seriously the London Standard's statement that republican institutions in America were being subjected to another test.

All these are splendid tributes to Governor Rusk, and they were written at a time when the Madison Democrat could appreciate the all-important services which the governor gave the state. But now the Democrat has joined the clamor of the anarchists for his defeat. What means all this? Why does the Democrat join the Bob Schilling crowd in saying that Governor Rusk must be dethroned? Is the paper so hide-bound in partisanship that it can not speak its right mind in the campaign, or has it changed its opinion, and now concludes that the governor did not do the state a good service in Milwaukee?

Blaine on Prohibition.

BLAINE ON PROHIBITION.

THE MAINE STATESMAN RATHER BITTER ON THE "DRY" PEOPLE.

Governor Seymour's Ideal Prohibition Community—Position of the Republicans—Hewitt Will Run for Mayor at Gotham—Theodore Roosevelt Nominated by the Republicans.

Boston, Oct. 15.—Mr. Blaine, who was here Friday on his way to Pennsylvania, was asked by a reporter what his thought of the situation in that state he said: "It is about the same as it was in Maine. The prohibition party are creating a bad case, and are determined to destroy the Republican party. I can speak in Pennsylvania with much more ease than I can in any other state, for the reason that the Republicans have put a plank in their platform endorsing the submission of the prohibition question to a popular vote. It is the only proper way to decide the matter. It was what would in Maine in 1858, and I can tell them in Pennsylvania how it worked in Maine."

"How about New York state?" "It is a little different there. I presume if the question was submitted to a popular vote it would be defeated, and that is the very reason why the temperance fanatics oppose such a proposition. It is true that the Republican party has never formally advocated prohibition in its platform, but every law that has been in any way to suppress the liquor traffic in the state has been passed by Republican legislatures."

DISAPPOINTED PATRIOTS.

The President Goes Fishing and Leaves Them in the Lurch.

Washington City, Oct. 16.—The president's sudden departure on a fishing trip Thursday night has left quite a number of anxious politicians stranded here for several days. They came Thursday night and Friday, from the north, south, east and west, and learned of his absence with surprise and consternation. A hundred or more visitors came to the executive mansion about 1 o'clock Friday afternoon, expecting to have an opportunity to shake hands with the president, but they, too, were disappointed, and after looking over the limited portion of the mansion open to the public, left regretting very much the absence of the chief magistrate. Politicians and people now here, who want to see President Cleveland, will have to wait until next Monday, for it is learned that he will not return to Washington until late Saturday night.

Theodore Roosevelt for Mayor.

New York, Oct. 16.—The Republican county convention met Friday night to make nominations. Theodore Roosevelt was nominated for mayor. John C. O'Connor, one of the two aldermen of 1884 who came out of the Broadway railway market with a pure reputation, was nominated for president of the board of aldermen. George W. Gould was nominated for register, and Greenville P. Hayes for judge of the superior court. An animated discussion was had over the nomination for judge of the supreme court, then long and arduous, candidates, Edward C. Ross and Edward P. Mitchell. The contest lasted until a late hour. Mr. Mitchell was finally nominated.

Referring to the "Fifth Curve" Convention.

New York, Oct. 16.—The Med and Ex-press says that at their last meeting the directors of the New York & New Haven railroad unanimously passed a resolution offered by Chauncey M. Depew, that the question of the location of the New York & New England railroad "be referred to the next annual convention now in session in this city, with power." Mr. Fields organ concludes that this finally disposes of the rumors of consolidation.

Indiana and Uncle Sam.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 16.—Referring to the discovery of the third auditor of the treasury at Washington, City, that Indiana had been allowed more for war expenses than she was entitled to, Judge Denny, ex-officio general of the state, says there was an over-allowance amounting to $2,000, but that it was not back in 1854, and the records here show the judge's statement to be true, for the receipt for the money is on file.

Conservative Batten in Canada.

Defending Her Dead Husband.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 16.—Mary J. Pruit, widow of Sergeant S. Pruit, has written an open letter to Rev. W. H. Milburn, severely condemning him for continuing to repeat in his lectures calumnies after having their groundlessness shown to him by relatives and friends of the deceased. Mrs. Pruit endorses the unselfishness and patriotism of her late husband and calls upon Mr. Milburn to retract his statements, or at least never repeat them without also repeating the testimony she has pointed to in his favor.

But he, full of pride, would not deign to see her who he sought to please. He said she was sickly. And in a week she never would put him again.

Then despair seized the maid of Dubuque. And her life with cold poison she took. And the young man, they say, Is now pining away. For he's haunted each night by her agonies. —Boston Courier.

—Justice Prichard was busy this morning trying to decide the points in a horse trade made by Michael Fary and Edward Leasly.

—Robert Clark, of Harmony, dined with the deceptive buzz saw this morning until his left hand was pretty well split in two. Dr. James Miller finally succeeded in patching him up so that the injured member may be of some use after all.

—The funeral of Jonette Boud infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Boud was held at the Presbyterian church yesterday. The Rev. W. F. Brown officiated at the sad services which were attended by many friends of the bereaved family. The remains were taken to Oak Hill for interment.

—The store of Vankirk Bros. is now experiencing all the agonies of house-cleaning. Fresh paint on all the wood work, bright calcimine on the walls and other improvements too numerous to mention seem likely to give the establishment an handsome appearance as could be desired.

—The New York Savings store was rushed with customers yesterday afternoon and last evening and their trade today has been very satisfactory. If you have not already called go in this evening and look over their stock. The arrangement is very attractive and reflects credit upon the management and his efficient helpers.

—After a period of "tearing up" Dr. Charles T. Peirce is now fairly settled in an office that for convenience and comfort would be hard to surpass. Instead of two rooms he now has a single one with the door considerably nearer the street than formerly. In one corner is a laboratory, cut off by doors of ground glass and provided with work benches and other fixtures. The changes have improved Dr. Peirce's office remarkably.

—Janesville base ball stock was at a lowebb yesterday when the game at the fair grounds was finished. The weather was unusually chilly for backers of the home team, as the score stood nineteen to nine in favor of the Northwesterns. By the end of the third inning the game was virtually settled, for Wilbur who pitched for the Janesvillers was being hit freely by the professionals. McGloin on the other hand seemed to be an unmovable puzzle to those who faced him. Errors were numerous and the contest could not on the whole, be called an interesting one.

—A peculiar accident was the one that happened to the son of J. M. Brey the other day, and that he just came to light. He was playing in the barn and had in his hand a pitch fork handle broken in such a manner that the end was quite pointed. The boy fell and this sharp end struck him in the throat. When doctors were called it was found that the point had, in its course, torn through the sheath that binds together the jugular vein and the carotid artery, but had passed between the two, leaving both uninjured. Had either been cut death would have resulted within a very few moments.

—Rev. Charles L. Harris, of Jackson, Miss., will speak in the Congregational church to-morrow evening the 17th inst., subject, "Condition and Prospects of the Colored Race in the South." Mr. Harris is one of Janesville's long the son of "Harris & Parker," barbers. He will be remembered by old-timers as the lively little fellow that was always ready to sell a "Chicago daily" or give you a shave. Mr. Harris is treasurer of Tongue University, also pastor of the Congregational church at Jackson, Miss. He is a scholar, and his address will be interesting.

—While John Sligham, engineer of the Water Works No. 2, was sitting at home last night thinking over the fact that he had just reached the forty-eighth mile stone in life's journey, there came a ring at the door bell and a party of friends, many of them comrades in the fire department, rushed in to wish him joy throughout the year that was beginning so pleasantly. They brought with them an elegantly upholstered rocking chair which was presented to the astonished engineer after a few remarks. The evening was spent very pleasantly, a choice supper being served, and many social diversions introduced. Birthdays would be at a premium if each was marked in such an enjoyable way.

—The long looked for report from the commissioners of appraisal in the Evansville cut off right-of-way matter was filed this afternoon. John W. McClendon was allowed four thousand two hundred, John Shortway two thousand eight hundred, the Subitt estate one thousand three hundred, Eliza Smith and the estate of Andrew Smith, one thousand two hundred and fifty, and the McCallum estate two hundred and fifty dollars. The report on the property of Aaron Rogers has not yet been made. Some of the figures were considerably higher than the appraisers, for the railway company had expected and it is rumored that in the Richardson matter, at least, an appeal will be made to the circuit court.
